Call for Participation: Three-Minute-Thesis Competition (Starting October 15, 2024)

Can you present the core message of your doctoral thesis in just three minutes? Can you explain your research to a group of lay people – in English? Then this is something for you!

The Graduate Schools and Alumni Göttingen are delighted to launch the call for the 2024 Three-Minute-Thesis (3MT) Competition. The competitors will present their research within three minutes with a single static slide. A jury will decide on the ranking of all presentations. In addition, the audience will vote for their own favourite. So don't forget to bring your colleagues and friends. Prizes of in sum 850 € will be awarded for the two best ranked competitors.

More information and registration here.

FoLL: Opening the door to research for students

Dear PhD-students, would you like to accompany and supervise a small group of interested students in all phases of the research process, while also pursuing your own research interests and developing your skills in research-oriented teaching?

Then FoLL is the right place for you. The "Research-oriented Teaching and Learning" program is aimed at Bachelor's students (the participation of 1/3 Master's students possible) and enables them to research a topic of their choice in a team and supervised by a teacher for a semester and to present the results to the university public at the end of the project.

In addition to the project work in the subjects, the Section for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education offers exchange meetings and workshops for teachers and students.

Application deadline for winter semester 24/25: 22.09.2024
